Introducing volunteer Sarah Crooke

At Prahran Place, our volunteers are at the heart of everything we do - and this month, we're delighted to shine a spotlight on local Prahran resident, Sarah Crooke. Sarah is a familiar and friendly face around the centre, generously giving her time two mornings a week to support a range of programs. She assists in our Inclusive Arts class, helping create a welcoming and creative space for participants, and also lends a hand in the kitchen during our Cooking Class, supporting participants and contributing to a positive, social environment.
Working professionally as a website analyst from home, Sarah values the opportunity to step out, connect with others, and contribute to her local community. Volunteering at Prahran Place offers her a meaningful balance - combining her work life with social connection and giving back.
We're incredibly grateful for Sarah's ongoing contribution over the past year, and the positivity and commitment she brings. Volunteers like Sarah help make Prahran Place the vibrant, supportive community it is today.
Thank you, Sarah!
